vintage champagne

Major Champagne houses make single vintage champagnes typically three or four times every decade. Not more than 80 percent of any year's harvest may be sold as vintage champagne, so at least 20 percent of the best year's harvest is conserved for the future blending of non vintage wines.

2000	Moët & Chandon	(Epernay, FR)	$140

white wines

sauvignon blanc, semillon & blends

Racy, fresh & fruity. this type of unwooded sauvignon blanc is typified by the wines from Marlborough, at the northern tip of New Zealand's south island . In Martinborough they tend to be more subdued and minerally, while the classic French wines from Pouilly and Sancerre can be textured, subtle and intriguing. Semillon can be quite a chameleon of a variety. in the hunter valley delicate, fine wines are made that demand age to gather complexity. The Barossa produces richer, more oily wines that are delicious young, but can usually gain from four or five years in bottle

2008	Barambah Semillon	(South Burnett, QLD)	$36
